INDIAN WIFE CLAIMS MARRIAGE WAS ILLEGAL

Tulsa, Okla., April 22.—Creek tribal customs, existing to an extent at the present time, made interesting the suit of Jonas Kano, or Jonas Lewis, against Lumber Billy and others in the local district court room this week. The suit was instituted to gain possession of certain lands in the Stone Bluff oil fields, now estimated to be worth $10,000, and which may become even more valuable as the development in that district is carried further.

Kano is a life term prisoner in the Oklahoma state penitentiary at McAlester where he was sentenced for murder a short time ago. He is seeking to get possession of the land which was a part of the allotment to his wife, Susie Billy and which fell into the hands of her father at her death. The plaintiff was present in the courtroom yesterday under guard by prison officials and watched the developments of the trial with the greatest interest.

The defense based its case on the ground that the plaintiff and Susie Billy never were legally married. The plaintiff's attorneys made their case on the testimony that according to the rites of the band in which Kano and Susie Billy were numbered, the marriage was as legal as that which takes place according to the statutes of the state and nation.

In the evidence it was brought out that Kano became identified with the Eufaula band of the Muskogee tribe, of which Edward Scott is the king. The Eufaula band was a "medicine" band which had a religious code of its own. Arrangements were made between the father of the bride and the prospective groom for the ceremony and after the blessing of the former, the ceremony was complete. Such a wedding took place for Kano and his bride. Witnesses went on the stand and described the feast that took place after the wedding. They told of the dances and the feasting and described how all of the rituals of the tribe were carried out when the groom partook of the "medicine" for four days, in order that his body and soul might be cleansed of impurities.

The defense instituted a claim that the plaintiff was not a member of the "medicine" band, but that he belonged to the "churchgoers," and that according to the laws of the tribe he was not legally married and therefore had no right to the property of his wife.

Two interpreters were called into service for the occasion. Practically every word of the evidence was given in the language of the Creeks and the court room was filled with fullbloods who grunted their interest from time to time. Many of these showed marked interest in the recital of customs which prevailed in Indian Territory before the hand of the white man instituted a different set of rules.

ANOTHER PLOT TO KILL J. P. MORGAN CHARGED

New York, April 23.—Harry L. Newton, arrested here Thursday on a charge of having agreed to blow up a munition plant, was prepared to kill J. P. Morgan, according to an affidavit submitted today in police court. On the strength of this document, Newton was held for examination next Tuesday.

In the affidavit, made by a detective, it is sworn that Newton promised to kill Mr. Morgan, if well paid for it, by running an automobile at full speed into the banker's car. If this scheme failed, Newton promised, according to the affidavit, to carry a time bomb into Mr. Morgan's offices and leave it there.

Newton was arrested after he was alleged to have agreed with detectives to destroy munitions plants in Danbury, New York, and Canada. He was arraigned yesterday and charged with bringing explosives from Canada. Exonerated of this accusation by the court, he was next held on a complaint that he had a bomb in his possession in Buffalo. This was also discarded, and he was then charged with conspiring to blow up the federal building in this city, for which he was held until the new charge was entered against him today.

Newton is described as an expert mechanic and a native-born American.
